

MINE DISASTER.

Greatest Fatality in The History of Pennsylvania.

Between 180 and 190 Miners Were in the Pit When the Dread Fire Damp Ignited--Latest Report is That at Least 170 Are Dead in the Mine.

Pittsburg, Jan. 26.—(Bulletin)—Of the 184 persons entombed in the mines at Cheswick but one has been rescued and all others are thought to be dead. The entire rescuing party was also killed.

Cheswick, Pa., Jan. 26.—(Bulletin)—All the men in the Harwick mine are known to be dead. There are at least 170 of them. They are piled up past the cave-in which was removed. They are in the north shaft, stuffed in solidly as if rammed in. There will be no haste in removing the bodies. This work will not begin until after night fall.

Cheswick, Pa., Jan. 26.—4 a. m.—"I am afraid they're all in now," said Manager Scheetz, at an early hour this morning, after the third shift of men had reached the top of the shaft. "Those men are working like heroes down there," continued Scheetz.

"They are getting a few bodies to the foot of the shaft—they have fifteen now. But they are dying as fast as we get them there. They are past medical aid. Even if we get some of them up here, I'm afraid they will die in the hospital before the night is over."

"I was confident we had saved 30 to 50 of them at 1 o'clock. I am as gloomy now as I was at midnight."

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan. 26.—The mysteries of one of the most dreadful mining catastrophes in the history of Pennsylvania or of the world, for that matter, are not yet solved—Harwick mine at Cheswick, has not given up its secret, or its dead.

It can be reliably stated that between 180 and 190 miners were in the pit when the dread fire damp ignited, blowing the cages clear out of the shafts and burying the inmates. Of these miners, but two have come out, one dead and one half dead from injuries and effects of the deadly after-damp. Even the rescuing parties have not escaped and Selwyn M. Taylor, the eminent mining engineer of this city, who plotted the mine and led the rescuers into the dark depths is lying dead, while his companions escaped with their lives only with the greatest difficulty. The work of attempting rescue was signalized by instances of the greatest bravery and the scenes about the pit mouth are tragic in the extreme.

A long distance telephone message from Cheswick received in Pittsburg at 5 a. m., says: "F. W. Cunningham, mine inspector of the 14th district, came out of the Harwick mine of the Allegheny coal company this morning and stated that he had gone about one fourth of a mile from the mouth of the pit, and did not think there were any living persons in the mine. He went into the left wing between the sixth and seventh headings and saw several dead mules, a number of demolished cars and about 16 dead men. He said he thought the great majority of the men met death through the afterdamp. Investigation between the sixth and seventh headings was abandoned when Inspector Cunningham came to a big cave-in that could not be passed. Until this obstruction is removed there will be no means of discovering what may be the conditions in a large part of the mine. Several men were placed at work removing the obstructions and the work of rescue was abandoned until daybreak."

FOURTEEN KILLED

Frightful Mining Accident at Cripple Creek, Colo.—Cage With Miners - Drops 1500 Feet.

Victor, Colo., Jan. 26.—One of the most frightful mining accidents in the history of the Cripple Creek district occurred this morning in Straton's Independence mine, when 14 men were killed instantly and their bodies mutilated, in some instances almost beyond identification.

A gang of 15 was on its way from the working below in a cage which traveled at a rapid speed. The machinery became disarranged and the engineer found himself helpless to stop the progress of the car as it approached the top of the shaft. The cage rushed up to the top of the structure, crashing into the heavy beams, when the cable broke, precipitating 14 men 1500 feet to the bottom of the shaft.

Two of the men managed to grasp iron bars at the top and held on. One however was killed and the other was badly crushed.

The descent of the cage was like a lightning flash. The bodies of the men presented a sickening spectacle, arms, legs and heads being torn away, while the surrounding walls were bespattered with their blood.

COL LYNCH

Liberated from Prison by King Edward—Was Convicted of Treason in South Africa

London, Jan. 26.—Colonel Arthur Lynch, who commanded the Irish brigade against the British forces during the war in South Africa, and who was afterward convicted of treason and sentenced to imprisonment for life, was liberated yesterday "on license." Lynch has not yet received the royal pardon.

The Associated Press learns that the liberation of Colonel Lynch is the outcome of an interesting series of events. When Michael Davitt was last in the United States he saw President Roosevelt, who mentioned Colonel Lynch to him, saying he had once entertained him at Albany.

The President expressed great interest in the case, and regretted he could not suggest clemency without laying himself open to a palpable snub. On his return to England Mr. Davitt mentioned his conversation with President Roosevelt to Sir Thomas Lipton and to Mrs. Lynch, who has suffered bitterly since her husband's arrest.

He also made a pathetic appeal to Sir Thomas, who then personally interceded with King Edward on behalf of the condemned fellow Irishman. Without any hesitation his majesty promptly informed the home secretary of his wishes in the matter and the prisoner was released.

Colonel Lynch, who completed a year in prison last Saturday, was the only political offender in prison in Ireland. Patrick A. McHugh, ex-member of the house of commons, who recently shared this distinction with Colonel Lynch, was only released from jail through the mediation of Sir Thomas Lipton with King Edward.

Colonel Lynch will enjoy personal liberty, and may even leave the country, should he care to do so, but not having received the royal pardon, he is disqualified from sitting in parliament and from holding any public office.

WARLIKE IN THE FAR EAST

London, Jan. 26.—Advices from the far east have again today taken on a more sinister tone. It is clearly apparent that in all the capitals, not even excepting Berlin, which has held out for peace hitherto, the feeling is rapidly gaining ground that matters have about reached the breaking point and that nothing short of a well defined back down by Russia can avert a clash. Japan continues her preparations for war.

THE WERTZ BILL

TO PROVIDE FOR GOOD ROADS IN OHIO.

Synopsis of the Measure Explaining What It Proposes and Benefits to the People.

Columbus, Jan. 26.—The Wertz bill, providing for a Public Roads Division to the Department of Agriculture and for State aid in road improvements, is not merely an experiment. It substantially follows the "State Aid" road laws of New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey, where it has been a great success. It benefits farmers, manufacturers, business men, and every class in the State of Ohio.

It provides that in roadways constructed of macadam, telford, gravel, or other suitable material, the state shall pay one-half the cost, the county one-fourth, the township in which the road is constructed one-fourth.

It provides that the state makes the plans for the improvement and has the construction made under the supervision of the county engineer, by selling the work to the lowest bidder, or by permitting the county or township to take the contract.

Material available and close at hand is considered first.

The state by this bill gives each county $3,000 for 1905 on condition that the county raises a similar amount. It is not compulsory for any county to accept this amount. The $3,000 appropriated by the state works no hardship on the land owners or taxpayers of any county, as this money is not raised by a tax on real estate or on personal property, inasmuch as the state raises this money by taxes on corporations, excise taxes, etc. It works no injustice to the people in those counties where permanent highways have been constructed, as this appropriation is available for rebuilding, reconstructing, etc., of such roads.

It creates a State Engineer, whose business will be to promote and look after the construction of roads in Ohio. It is the intention of the bill to create the machinery necessary to build good roads, get plans made so that actual construction can begin in 1905. It is believed that the wisdom of this measure will be made so manifest by the time the next session of the legislature convenes that provision will be made for continuing the good work until from this small beginning there shall grow year after year a permanent road system until every road in Ohio is good for travel twelve months in the year; and instead of having roads that are a disgrace to our civilization, it will place Ohio in the first rank of states with permanent roadways.

Write the author what you think about this measure, and help push the good work along. Write your Representative and Senator.

CLASPED A CORPSE

Anoka, Minn., Jan. 26.—A party of young people dining at a restaurant

Flicker, a young farmer, started on a sleigh ride to Blaine last night. The young lady accompanying Flicker had her arm around him, and, after a long silence on the part of young Flicker, she discovered to her horror that he was dead. The coroner decided that death was due to heart failure.

FIRE

At Wellston Destroys Several Residences, and Citizens Helped to Check the Flames.

Wellston, O., Jan. 26.—At an early hour yesterday morning fire broke out in the two story frame residence of R. C. Burden, completely destroying it. The flames were carried by the high winds to the frame residences of Lon Herold and John Littlejohn, burning them to the ground, with their entire contents. All three carried slight insurance and their losses will be very heavy. Several exciting incidents attended the fire. The citizens responded to aid the local fire department and the bucket brigades did good work in preventing the spread of the flames.

LYNCHING

Threatened West Virginia Negro Who is Charged With Kidnaping a 14-Year Old White Girl.

Wheeling, W. Va., Jan. 26.—As the B. & O. train from the east arrived at Littleton at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon a passenger informed Police Officer Arthur Higgins that there was a negro on board in company with a young white girl and that he believed he was kidnaping her.

As Higgins boarded the train the negro and girl got off on the other side and started to run. When Higgins started in pursuit the negro turned and fired at the officer, emptying his revolver. Higgins returned the fire, but none of the shots took effect. The negro, while running, displayed and flourished two revolvers.

Higgins having exhausted his ammunition called for help and a crowd soon collected and started on a hunt for the negro, who in the meantime had disappeared. About two hours later he was found hidden behind a fence, but weaponless, as he had thrown away his revolvers. He was taken to jail.

A mob surrounded the jail and threats of lynching were made, the crowd going to the point of securing a rope. Wiser counsels prevailed and the crowd finally dispersed.

The negro gave his name as Lewis Jones, but would not talk of the affair. He will be held at Littleton until the county authorities at New Martinsville can be communicated with.

The girl, who gave her name as Essie Martin is about 14 years of age. At the home of Officer Higgins, where she was taken, she stated that her home was in Shinnstown, and while walking along the road the negro had caught her, placed her in a buggy and had driven to the station. She did not know where he was taking her, and was afraid to ask for protection or help.

CHICAGO'S MAYOR

And Other City Officials Held to Grand Jury

For Alleged Responsibility and Negligence in the Iroquois Theatre Fire--Harrison Furious When Warrant Was Served--Building Commissioners Held for Gross Neglect of Duty.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—The coroner's jury in the Iroquois fire brought in a verdict last night, holding the following persons to the grand jury: Mayor C. H. Harrison, Will J. Davis, president of the Iroquois company; James E. Cummings, stage carpenter; Wm. McMullen, operator of the "spot light;" W. H. Musham, chief of the Fire Department; George Williams, building inspector; Edward Laughlin, assistant inspector, and W. C. Sellers, stage fireman.

The verdict merely recommends that they be held to the grand jury until they are released by due process of law. There is no charge or comment made in any case but that of Mayor Harrison, who is condemned for his "lamentable tendency to shirk responsibility" and for his "weak course and inefficiency" in City Hall administration. All the men furnished bonds and were saved from going to jail.

"The jury's deliberations were not long, considering the length of the inquest hearing, but the latter was so detailed and the evidence so clear that last night's verdict was almost a foregone conclusion. The theatre managers evidently anticipated the verdict, for, after the first day or two, their lawyers did little more than to watch proceedings. Their fight will be made when the case comes to trial.

Mr. Davis would not talk except to say that he thought the verdict was unfair. Mayor Harrison was furious. Commissioner Williams was downcast, and Chief Musham refused to talk. It is thought that these two officials and Assistant Laughlin will be made to walk the plank by the city administration in a week or so. The fire department under Musham is notoriously weak, and the fire insurance men have clamored for his removal for some time. Considerable pity is felt for Williams, who has only been in office a short time and who has really done more to reform the department than any of his predecessors. But even his friends do not deny that in the Iroquois matter he was lamentably lax, for he could have done his duty, have refused permission for the theatre to open.

The passing of nearly a month has not dulled the feeling of anger at whoever was responsible for the disaster, and it is thought the grand jury which is in session will hold nearly every man named last night to the Criminal court for trial.

State's Attorney Dineen and his assistants have been in constant attendance at the hearing, and they will be fully posted when the grand jury takes the matter up and when it finally reaches trial. It is also generally conceded that the theatre men brought forward very little evidence to prove that they were not negligent in a high degree.

The findings of the jury were as follows:

The cause of the fire was a gas coming into contact with a flood of arc light; city laws were not complied with relating to building ordinances, regulating fire alarm boxes, fire apparatus, damper or flues on and over the stage, and fly galleries.

Violation of the ordinance requiring fire proofing of scenery and all wood work on and about the stage.

Asbestos curtain was wholly inadequate and was entirely destroyed.

Building ordinances violated in that aisles were inclosed on each side of the lower boxes and absence of fire apparatus on the orchestra floor.

Building ordinance violated in that there was no fire apparatus in the gallery or first balcony.

Will J. Davis was held responsible as president and general manager. He was primarily responsible for the negligence of the laws, and was compelled to see that his employees were properly instructed as to their duties in case of fire.

In relation to Mayor Harrison the verdict reads as follows.

"We hold Carter H. Harrison, as Mayor of the city of Chicago, responsible, as he has shown a lamentable lack of force, and for his efforts to escape responsibility, evidenced by the testimony of Building Commissioner Williams and Fire Marshal Musham, as heads of departments under the said Carter H. Harrison, following this week course has given Chicago inefficient service which makes such calamities as the Iroquois theatre horror a menace until the public service is purged of incompetents."

Building Commissioner Williams was held "for gross neglect of his duty in allowing the theatre to open its doors to the public, when the said theatre was incomplete, but did not comply with the building ordinances of the city of Chicago."

Fire Marshal Musham was held responsible "for gross neglect of duty in not enforcing the city ordinances, and failure to have his subordinate, Wm. Sellers, fireman at the theatre, report to him of the lack of fire apparatus in the theatre." Sellers was held for not reporting the lack of fire apparatus, McMullen for carelessness in handling the light that caused the fire, Cummings as stage carpenter, for not providing the stage with proper fire protection.

A special grand jury will convene next week to reopen the investigation and decide what action shall be taken on the report of the Coroner's jury. The charges as far as the city officials are concerned, which the grand jury will consider is malfeasance in office. Convictions mean their removal from office in addition to any other penalty.

WARRANTS SERVED

This morning on the Officials Held to Grand Jury.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—Declaring that his "tendency to shirk responsibility" is the cause of a "weak course and inefficiency" in the city hall administration, the coroner's jury in the Iroquois fire investigation last night held Mayor Harrison to the grand jury. "Until he is discharged by due course of law," is the tenure of the term of accusation which the jury fixed.

At midnight a mittimus for the arrest of the mayor was made out by Coroner John E. Traeger and turned over to the police department for service.

With Mayor Harrison the following were held to the grand jury as responsible in part for the fire, and its attending holocaust which the jury declared was the result of violations of the city ordinances in every part of the playhouse:

Will J. Davis, president of the Iroquois Theatre company, and manager of the theatre. Held to be responsible for neglect in not seeing that the theatre was properly constructed and properly equipped.

Wm. H. Musham, chief of the fire department held responsible for not seeing that the theatre was equipped with fire apparatus as required by the ordinance and with not properly instructing Fireman Wm. C. Sellers in his duties.

George Williams, building commissioner. Responsible for allowing the Iroquois theatre to be opened when not completed and without having made a thorough inspection of the structure and its equipments.

Edward Laughlin, building inspector. Guilty of gross negligence and neglect of duty in reporting the theatre "O. K." when it was not properly furnished and equipped.

Three Children Burned.

Colina, O., Jan. 26.—The farm house of Henry Frysinger, near here, burned last night. Three children of Frysinger burned to death. Frysinger and his wife will probably die as a result of exposure and burns received while attempting to rescue the children.

DRAMATIC UTTERANCE

By Rev. Thomas E. Sherman on the Threats of Unionism Interfering With Funerals--A Greater Menace Than the Southern Confederacy.

Chicago, Jan. 26.—"The threats of unionism in Chicago and elsewhere throughout the country today are a greater menace to liberty and the foundations of the government than the southern confederacy ever was. There is grave danger around us today.

"When my duty as a clergyman is interfered with in giving decent Christian burial to the dead, then, may I ask, is there any government in the city of Chicago? When men have no respect for the dead, surely they have none for the living."

This was the dramatic utterance of the Rev. Thomas E. Sherman, S. J., son of the late General W. T. Sherman.

last night at the 15th annual banquet of the Western Society of the Army of the Potomac at the Sherman house.

General Frederick D. Grant and nearly 200 members of the society and their wives and daughters heard the priest's words.

"We must reorganize labor throughout the country, or we will have another conflict greater than any the American people has had to contend with," continued the speaker.

"I am glad that Fred D. Grant is military commander in Chicago—military commander in the city where the threat and danger lies of another struggle for liberty."

DAME FASHION'S HUES.
Colors Which Will Be Most Popular in the Spring.
The new color cards are out for the coming spring, and we see that grays and combinations of black and white are to be among the most fashionable of all things for dress materials. I find, too, in looking about that silks are shown in many combinations of black and white. This does not mean check-board squares by any means, but fine stripes and in some few cases pin head checks. These latter are always neat and desirable, especially for such garments as are to be worn often. Trimmed simply with black braid or a little velvet ribbon, they are very pleasing, and there is something very Frenchy about the pin head and shepherd check.
Hair lines are seen in many kinds of materials adapted for spring wear, and now is the time to make such garments. There are several kinds of homespun stuffs with the body of the material in solid color or pepper and salt clusters of white stripes. These may all be of the same width, or some may be an eighth of an inch wide, while others are but one thread. But, however they are, they are always neat and pretty. They really require but little trimming, and here stitching comes in as a natural selection.

So long a time has passed since silk was worn to any extent in the street as a full costume we have almost come to regard silk as intended only for the house, but the coming season will, if all signs do not fail, see many suits of silk, and not all black either. There is a design in which the rich and heavy body of the silk is black, but there are clusters of white stripes, arranged so that two narrow stripes are set each side of a wider one. Sometimes there will be six or more fine white lines all together and of the same width. Again they will begin on one side with fine lines, which widen until the last one is a quarter of an inch wide. These are all straight, but once in awhile we see one where the lines are all wavy. Sometimes the lines are made up of tiny checks of black and white.
Cinnamon brown and several of the pleasing wood shades will be seen and some dull and navy blues for ordinary spring outdoor wear, but grays, gun metal mixtures and black and white effects would now seem to be the outlook. For the present, while still the winter festivities are in order, there are many different weights and qualities of white silks, and these are all fine and look well when properly made. Black lace medallions, spangles and chenille embroidery are all suitable, and dummies are frequently seen where the lace has narrow black velvet ribbon run through the holes made for the purpose. Crepe de chine in white and cream makes pretty gowns for dinner and all evening dresses except dancing frocks for the young. For this purpose there are many different kinds of light silks, such as louisine, liberty and delicate satin liberty. For evening waists where high necked gowns are suitable there are some really handsome corded silks, which look superbly rich and sumptuous and yet cost very little.
Among the silks intended for late spring and summer are many fancy foulards, polka dotted twills and satin liberties. Taffeta is now one of the standard silks and has displaced almost entirely all the heavy corded ones, such as rhadamens, armure, faille and peau de soie. We do see some of these heavier silks occasionally, but they are more for cloaks than for gowns. It is a pity, for there is nothing to equal black silk.
Woolen goods for the spring are now shown, and among them we find all sorts of colors in all wool vicuna chevrons, tweeds, plain chevrons, canvas suitings, covert cloths, satin faced coverts, flake suitings, twilled and plain homespun, many kinds of velvets in canvas weave and plain, waists in Scotch chevrons and wools, granite cloths draped and plain, and most of these are both mercerized and crumpled so as to be lustrous and waterproof.
From present appearances there will be much of the semimilitary ornamentation on suits for young women. It is very striking, and therefore should not be worn by those who have passed their first youth. The plan consists in having braid or cord or velvet put on the coat, with lots of shining brass buttons. The illustration shows deep cuffs with the gold braid and buttons, and also the arrangement of the same trimming on the shoulders and in front. The skirt of such a suit should be plain but neatly made, and the hat to be in keeping should be of the trimme variety. HENRIETTE ROUSSEAU.

The League of the Old Men

By JACK LONDON

Copyright, 1903, by Jack London

At the barracks a man was being tried for his life. He was an old man, a native from the Whitefish river, which empties into the Yukon below Lake Le Barge. All Dawson was wrought up over the affair and likewise the Yukon dwellers for a thousand miles up and down. It has been the custom of the land robbing and sea robbing Anglo-Saxon to give the law to conquered peoples, and oftentimes this law is harsh. But in the case of Imber the law for once seemed inadequate and weak. In the mathematical nature of things equity did not reside in the punishment to be accorded him. The punishment was a foregone conclusion, there could be no doubt of that, and though it was capital, Imber had but one life, while the tale against him was one of scores.
In fact, the blood of so many was upon his hands that the killings attributed to him did not permit of precise enumeration. Smoking a pipe by the trail side or lounging around the stove, men made rough estimates of the numbers that had perished at his hand. They had been whites, all of them, these poor murdered people, and they had been slain singly, in pairs and in parties. And so purposeless and wanton had been these killings that they had long been a mystery to the mounted police, even in the time of the captains, and later, when the creeks realized, and a governor came from the Dominion to make the land pay for its prosperity.
But more mysterious still was the coming of Imber to Dawson to give himself up. In was in the late spring, when the Yukon was growling and writhing under its ice, that the old Indian climbed painfully up the bank from the river trail and stood blinking on the main street. Men who had witnessed his advent noted that he was weak and tottery and that he staggered over to a heap of cabin logs and sat down. He sat there a full day staring straight before him at the unceasing tide of white men that flooded past. Many a head jerked curiously to the side to meet his stare, and more than one remark was dropped anent the old Siwash with so strange a look upon his face.
But it remained for Dickens-Little Dickens-to be the hero of the occasion. Little Dickens had come into the land with great dreams and a pocketful of cash, but with the cash the dreams vanished, and to earn his passage back to the States he had accepted a clerical position with the brokerage firm of Holbrook & Mason. Across the street from the office of Holbrook & Mason was the heap of cabin logs upon which Imber sat. Dickens looked out of the window at him before he went to lunch, and when he came back from lunch he looked out of the window, and the old Siwash was still there.
Dickens was a romantic little chap, and he likened the immobile old head to the genius of the Siwash race, gazing calm eyed upon the hosts of the invading Saxon. The hours swept along, but Imber did not vary his posture, did not move a muscle, and Dickens remembered a man who once sat upright on a sled in the main street where men passed to and fro. They thought the man was resting, but later they found him stiff and cold, frozen to death in the midst of the busy street. To undoubt him, that he might fit into a coffin, they had been forced to lug him to a fire and thaw him out a bit. Dickens shivered at the recollection.
Later on Dickens went out on the sidewalk to smoke a cigar and cool off, and a little later Emily Travis happened alone. Emily Travis was dainty and delicate and rare, and whether in London or Klondike she gowned herself as befit the daughter of a millionaire mining engineer. Little Dickens deposited his cigar on an outside window ledge, where he could find it again, and lifted his hat.
They chatted for ten minutes or so, when Emily Travis, glancing past Dickens's shoulder, gave a startled little scream. Dickens turned about to see and was startled too. Imber had crossed the street and was standing there, a gaunt and hungry looking shadow, his gaze riveted upon the girl.
"What do you want?" Little Dickens demanded, tremulously plucky.
Imber granted and stalked up to Emily Travis. He looked her over keenly and carefully. Especially did he appear interested in her silky brown hair and in the color of her cheeks, faintly sprayed and soft, like the downy bloom of a butterfly wing. He walked around her, surveying her with the calculating eye of a man who studies the lines upon which a horse or a boat is built. In the course of his circuit the pink shell of her ear came between his eye and the western sun, and he stopped to contemplate its rose transparency. Then he returned to her face and looked long and intently into her blue eyes. He granted and laid a hand on her arm midway between the shoulder and elbow. With his other hand he lifted her forearm and doubled it back. Disgust and wonder showed in his face, and he dropped her arm with a contemptuous grunt.
Then he muttered a few guttural syllables, turned his back on her and addressed himself to Dickens.
Dickens could not understand his speech, and Emily Travis laughed. Imber turned from one to the other, frowning, but both shook their heads. He was about to go away when she called out:
"Oh, Jimmy, come here!"
Jimmy came from the other side of the street. He was a big, hulking Indian, clad in approved white man style, with an El Dorado king's sombrero on his head. He talked with Imber haltingly, with throaty spasms. Jimmy was a Sitkan, possessed of no more than a passing knowledge of the interior dialects.
"Him Whitefish man," he said to Emily Travis. "He save um talk no very much. Him want to look see chief white man."
"The governor," suggested Dickens.
Jimmy talked some more with the Whitefish man, and his face became grave and puzzled.
"I tink um want Cap'n Alexander," he explained. "Him say um kill white man, white woman, white boy, plenty kill um white people. Him want to die."
"Insane, I guess," said Dickens. "What you call dat?"
Dickens thrust a finger figuratively inside his head and imparted a rotary motion thereto.
"Mebbe so, mebbe so," said Jimmy, returning to Imber, who still demanded the chief man of the white men.
A mounted policeman (unmounted for Klondike service) joined the group and heard Imber's wish repeated. He was a stalwart young fellow, broad shouldered, deep chested, legs clean built and stretched wide apart, and tall though Imber was, he towered above him by a head. His eyes were cool and gray and steady, and he carried himself with the peculiar confidence of power that is bred of blood and tradition. His splendid masculinity was emphasized by his excessive boyishness—he was a mere lad—and his smooth cheek promised a blush as willingly as the cheek of a maid.
Imber was drawn to him at once. The fire leaped into his eyes at sight of a saber slash that scarred his cheek. He ran a withered hand down the young fellow's leg and caressed the swelling thigh. He smote the broad chest with his knuckles and pressed and prodded the thick muscle pads that covered the shoulders like a cuirass. The group had been added to by curious passersby—husky miners, mountaineers and frontiersmen, sons of the long legged and broad shouldered generations. Imber glanced from one to another. Then he spoke aloud in the Whitefish tongue.
"What did he say?" asked Dickens.
"Him say um all the same one man, dat policeman," Jimmy interpreted.
Little Dickens was little, and because of Miss Travis he felt sorry for having asked the question. The policeman was sorry for him and stepped into the breach.
"I fancy there may be something in his story. I'll take him up to the captain for examination. Tell him to come along with me, Jimmy."
Jimmy indulged in more throaty spasms, and Imber granted and looked satisfied.
"But ask him what he said, Jimmy, and what he meant when he took hold of my arm." So spoke Emily Travis, and Jimmy put the question and received the answer.
"Him say you no afraid," said Jimmy.
Emily Travis looked pleased.
"Him say you no skookum, no strong, all the same very soft like little baby. Him break you, in um two hands, to little pieces. Him tink much funny, very strange, how you can be mother of men so big, so strong, like dat policeman."
Emily Travis kept her eyes up and unfaltering, but her cheeks were sprayed with scarlet. Little Dickens blushed and was quite embarrassed. The policeman's face blazed with his boy's blood.
"Come along, you," he said gruffly, setting his shoulder to the crowd and forcing a way.
Thus it was that Imber found his way to the barracks, where he made full and voluntary confession and from the precincts of which he never emerged.
Imber looked very tired. The fatigue of hopelessness and age was in his face. His shoulders drooped depressingly, and his eyes were lackluster. His mop of hair should have been white, but sun and weather had burned and bitten it so that it hung limp and lifeless and colorless. He took no interest in what went on around him. The court room was jammed with the men of the creeks and trails, and there was an ominous note in the rumble and at times of their low pitched voices which came to his ears like the growl of the sea from deep caverns.
He sat close by a window, and his apathetic face rested now and again on the dingy scene without. The sky was overcast, and a gray drizzle was falling. It was floodtime on the Yukon. The ice was gone, and the river was up in the town. Back and forth on the main street, in canoes and poling boats, passed the people that never rested. Often he saw these boats turn aside from the street and enter the flooded square that marked the barracks parade ground. Sometimes they disappeared beneath him, and he heard them jar against the house logs and their occupants scramble in through the window. After that came the slush of water against men's legs as they waded across the lower room and mounted the stairs. Then they appeared in the doorway with doffed hats and dripping sea boots and added themselves to the waiting crowd.

And while they centered their looks on him, and in grim anticipation enjoyed the penalty he was to pay, Imber looked at them and mused on their ways and on their law, which never slept, but went on unceasing in good times and bad, in flood and famine, through trouble and terror and death, and which would go on unceasing, it seemed to him, to the end of time.
A man rapped sharply on a table, and the conversation droned away into silence. Imber looked at the man. He seemed one in authority, yet Imber divined the square browed man who sat by a desk farther back to be the one chief over them all and over the man who had rapped. Another man by the same table arose and began to read aloud from many fine sheets of paper. At the top of each sheet he cleared his throat, at the bottom moistened his fingers. Imber did not understand his speech, but the others did, and he knew that it made them angry. Sometimes it made them very angry, and once a man cursed him in single syllables, stinging and tense, till the man at the table rapped his mouth shut.
For an interminable period the man read. His monotonous singsong utterance lured Imber to dreaming, and he was dreaming deeply when the man ceased. A voice spoke to him in his own Whitefish tongue, and he roused up, without surprise, to look upon the face of his sister's son, a young man who had wandered away years ago to make his dwelling with the whites.
"Thou dost not remember me," he said, by way of greeting.
"Nay," Imber answered. "Thou art Howkan, who went away. Thy mother be dead."
"She was an old woman," said Howkan.
But Imber did not hear, and Howkan, with hand upon his shoulder, roused him again.
"I shall speak to thee what the man has spoken, which is the tale of the troubles thou hast done and which thou hast told, O fool, to the Captain Alexander. And thou shalt understand and say if it be true talk or talk not true. It is so commanded."
Howkan had fallen among the mission folk and been taught by them to read and write. In his hands he held the many fine sheets from which the man had read aloud and which had been taken down by a clerk when Imber first made confession, through the mouth of Jimmy, to Captain Alexander. Howkan began to read. Imber listened for a space, when a wonderment rose up in his face, and he broke in abruptly:
"That be my talk, Howkan. Yet from thy lips it comes when thy ears have not heard."
Howkan smiled with self appreciation. His hair was parted in the middle. "Nay, from the paper it comes, O Imber! Never have my ears heard."

Disgust and wonder showed in his face. From the paper it comes, through my eyes, into my head and out of my mouth to thee. Thus it comes."
"Thus it comes? It be there in the paper?" Imber's voice sank in whisper as he cracked the sheets between thumb and finger and stared at the characters scrawled thereon. "It be great medicine, Howkan, and thou art a worker of wonders."
"It be nothing, it be nothing," the young man responded carelessly and proudly. He read at random from the document: "In that year, before the break of the ice, came an old man and a boy who was lame of one foot. These also did I kill, and the old man made much noise."
"It be true," Imber interrupted breathlessly. "He made much noise and would not die for a long time. But how dost thou know, Howkan? The chief man of the white men told thee, mayhap? No one behid me, and him alone have I told."
Howkan shook his head with impatience. "Hare I not told thee it be there in the paper, O fool?"
Imber stared hard at the ink scrawled surface. "As the hunter looks upon the snow and says, 'Here but yesterday there passed a rabbit, and here by the willow scrub it stood and listened and heard and was afraid, and here it turned upon its trail, and here it went with great swiftness, leaping wide; and here, with greater swiftness and wider leaping, came a lynx; and here, where the claws cut deep into the snow, the lynx made a very great leap; and here it struck, with the rabbit under and rolling belly up; and here leads off the trail of the lynx alone, and there is no more rabbit—as the hunter looks upon the markings of the snow and says thus and so and here, dost thou, too, look upon the paper and say thus and so and here be the things old Imber hath done?"

"Even so," said Howkan. "And now do thou listen and keep thy woman's tongue between thy teeth till thou art called upon for speech."
Thereafter for a long time Howkan read to him the confession, and Imber remained musing and silent. At the end he said:
"It be my talk and true talk, but I am grown old, Howkan, and forgotten things come back to me which were well for the headman there to know. First, there was the man who came over the ice mountains with cunning traps made of iron, who sought the beaver of the Whitefish. Him I slew. And there were three men seeking gold on the Whitefish long ago. Them also I slew and left them to the wolves. And at the Five Fingers there was a man with a raft and much meat."
At the moments when Imber paused to remember Howkan translated and a clerk reduced to writing. The court room listened stolidly to each unadorned little tragedy till Imber told of a red haired man whose eyes were crossed and whom he had killed with a remarkably long shot.
Imber's head drooped once more, and his eyes grew dull, as though a film rose up and covered them from the world. And he dreamed as only age can dream upon the colossal futility of youth.
Later Howkan roused him again, saying: "Stand up, O Imber. It be commanded that thou tell why thou didst these troubles and slew these people and at the end journeyed here seeking the law."
Imber rose feebly to his feet and swayed back and forth. He began to speak in a low and faintly rumbling voice, but Howkan interrupted him.
"This old man, he is crazy," he said in English to the square browed man. "His talk is foolish and like that of a child."
"We will hear his talk which is like that of a child," said the square browed man. "And we will hear it word for word as he speaks it. Do you understand?"
Howkan understood, and Imber's eyes flashed, for he had witnessed the play between his sister's son and the man in authority. And then began the story, the epic of a bronze patriot which itself might well be wrought into bronze for generations unborn. The crowd fell strangely silent, and the square browed judge leaned head on hand and pondered his soul and the soul of his race. Only were heard the deep tones of Imber, rhythmically alternating with the shrill voice of the interpreter.
"I am Imber of the Whitefish people," so ran the interpretation of Howkan, whose inherent barbarism gripped hold of him and who lost his mission culture and veneered civilization as he caught the savage ring and rhythm of old Imber's tale. "My father was Otsabok, a strong man. The land was warm with sunshine and gladness when I was a boy. The people did not hunger after strange things nor hearken to new voices, and the ways of their fathers were their ways. The women found favor in the eyes of the young men, and the young men looked upon them with content. Babes hung at the breasts of the women, and they were heavy hipped with increase of the tribe. Men were men in those days. In peace and plenty and in war and famine they were men.
"At that time there were more fish in the waters than now and more meat in the forest. Our dogs were wolves, warm with thick hides and hard to the frost and storm. And as with our dogs, so with us, for we were likewise hard to the frost and storm. And when the Pellys came into our land we slew them and were slain, for we were men, we Whitefish, and our fathers and our fathers' fathers had fought against the Pellys and determined the bounds of the land.
"As with our dogs, I say, so with us. And one day came the first white man. He dragged himself—so on hand and knee, in the snow. And his skin was stretched tight, and his bones were sharp beneath. Never was such a man, we thought, and we wondered of what strange tribe he was and of his land. And he was weak, most weak, like a little child, so that we gave him a place by the fire and warm furs to lie upon, and we gave him food as little children are given food.
"And with him was a dog, large as three of our dogs and very weak. The hair of this dog was short and not warm, and the tail was frozen so that the end fell off. And this strange dog we fed and bedded by the fire and fought from him our dogs, which else would have killed him. And what of the moose meat and the sun dried salmon the man and dog took strength to themselves, and what of the strength they became big and unafraid. And the man spoke loud words and laughed at the old men and young men and looked boldly upon the incidents. And the dog fought with our dogs and for all of his short hair and softness slew three of them in one day.
"When we asked the man concerning his people he said, 'I have many brothers,' and laughed in a way that was not good. And when he was in his (Continued on Page 7.)

Civil War Veteran's Advice Saved Philadelphia Man's Life.

Again Despair is Turned Into Victory by the Famous Tonic.

Paine's Celery Compound

"ALL RUN DOWN"—NERVOUS AND HAD DYSPEPSIA.
S. J. Bunkin's Case Like Thousands of Other Sufferers.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 26, 1903—"Two bottles of Paine's Celery Compound convinced me that I had at last discovered a remedy that proved a permanent cure for a run-down system, nervousness, liver complaints and dyspepsia, from which I suffered untold agony for years. "Other, so-called cures which I spent small fortunes on, proved worthless and seemed only to make my condition all the more severe. For years I suffered from a general run-down system that was gradually drawing me nearer, day by day, to my last resting place. "I WAS LOSING WEIGHT RAPIDLY. COULD EAT BUT VERY LITTLE—AFTER WHICH I SUFFERED INTENSELY. IN LESS THAN A YEAR I WAS REDUCED ALMOST TO A SKELETON. After trying several prominent physicians, all of whom told me that my case was puzzling without in the least benefiting my condition, I gave up in despair, believing my disease incurable. I had taken any quantity of medicines advertised, but they were no good. "PAINE'S CELERY COMPOUND WAS RECOMMENDED TO ME BY AN OLD CIVIL WAR VETERAN WHOM I MET IN A PUBLIC PARK. THIS WISDOM OF THE INFALLIBLE REMEDY WAS SO GREAT I DECIDED TO GIVE IT A TRIAL. "I purchased two bottles, and before I had finished taking it a change for the better in my condition made its appearance. I continued to take the medicine and my health of former years came back. My weight, which had been 150 lbs., increased to 200 lbs., and after taking five bottles of the great tonic I was entirely cured. "Today I weigh more than ever before in my life, my nerves have gained their normal condition, and my health in general is perfect. I give praise to nothing but Paine's Celery Compound, and would not be without this great remedy."—S. J. BUNKIN, 322 Marion Street.

FREE TRIP

TO THE ST. LOUIS WORLD'S FAIR,
THE PRIZE
For Which Membership Teams in the Newark Y. M. C. A. Will Begin a Contest

At the World's Fair Social held in the Y. M. C. A. parlors Monday night, the membership committee, through the chairman, Mr. A. S. Stephan, made the final announcements regarding the World's Fair Membership Tournament and the eager interest in which the announcement was heard and the readiness with which a number of the members present at once registered promises well for the success of the tournament. The following are the prizes offered by the Association and the conditions which shall govern the tournament:

1. Two men shall constitute a team. Open to all members of the Association.
2. Every dollar brought in in new membership shall count one point for the team bringing it in.
3. To the team scoring the largest number of points by May 1, 1904, the Association offers: Free transportation to St. Louis and return and one dollar a day for 6 days to each man for expenses at the fair.
4. To the team scoring the second largest number of points by May 1, 1904, the Association offers: Free transportation to St. Louis and return.
5. To every other team in the Tournament the Association offers to pay: One dollar towards the team's trip to the fair for every ten points scored.
6. In case of a tie for either first or second place, time will be extended one week to the teams having tied, to determine the winner.
7. Membership points cannot be transferred from one team to another.

Another announcement was made last night that will probably interest an even larger number than the tournament, and that is the organization of a "World's Fair Club" of all those who are intending to attend the Fair. The object will be to study together the city of St. Louis, the arrangements and plans of the Fair, to secure through the Y. M. C. A. World's Fair Bureau of the St. Louis Association, the proper information regarding hotels and boarding houses. In fact, in every way possible, get all who intend going to the Fair, prepared to make the most out of his trip.

The ceremony over the pig, which was roasted whole was made with closed doors, and the reporter was excluded from this interesting feature.

The banqueting room was beautifully decorated for the occasion, and presented a very handsome appearance. The pig, which was a very large one, looked toothsome with a big red apple in its mouth and decorated with purple ribbons. Following is the menu:

THE SMOOT CASE IN THE SENATE

Now that it has been definitely decided to refer the Smoot case to the whole Senate, the country ought to get a clear and impartial insight into the real situation in Utah and other communities in the West where Mormonism is strong. The charge is not that the Mormons generally are practicing polygamy, and in fact it is probably not true that Senator Smoot has now or has ever had at one time more than one wife. The principle at issue transcends in importance this strictly moral question, and reaches up to the very highest plane of our government. That is that Mormonism exacts of its followers a loyalty in temporal affairs that strikes at the root of the republic, and that the church is even stronger as a political machine than as a religious organization. With the religious part of it Congress can have nothing to do, but if Smoot is in the Senate as the result of a deal between the Republican managers and the leaders of the Mormon church, then he ought to be turned out. If, then, the church should turn around and make a deal with the Democratic party, its representatives chosen through this arrangement should not be permitted to occupy seats in Congress.

ENGLAND'S TARIFF CAMPAIGN.

(Pittsburg Post.)
Mr. Chamberlain's increased aggressiveness has had one excellent effect on current English politics, anyhow. It has imparted to the campaign a candor and frankness that reveal the issues so clearly as to have divided the electorate at this early stage of the fight for a radically new fiscal policy in Great Britain into protectionists and free traders. At the most recent by-elections, those at Gateshead and Norwich the Chamberlain candidates were defeated by decisive pluralities. But this is not the most staggering blow Mr. Chamberlain has received in the last week. The most disastrous happening to the cause he represents was its desertion by the Duke of Devonshire, than whom no person in the United Kingdom wields a broader influence in all fiscal matters. It is said that he will carry with him into the Chamberlain opposition camp fully one-half of the Liberal-Unionists, which party he was instrumental in forming to checkmate Gladstone's home rule movement, and at least a fourth of the Tories. It is not beyond the pale of the probabilities that Devonshire's defection may lead to a ministerial crisis, and Lord Balfour is reported now to be very greatly in fear of that eventuality at an early date. It begins to look as if England is not yet ready to desert her free trade policy.

A New York newspaper yesterday published the results of a partial poll of Democratic National and State committeemen and editors on the question of the reaffirmation of the Chicago and Kansas City platforms by the National convention at St. Louis in July. Only eight members of the National committee responded to the query, but everyone of the eight expressed emphatic protest against reaffirmation. Of the ten State committeemen quoted six are against reaffirmation. Nine of the twenty-one representative editors who answered the question spoke strongly against Mr. Bryan's contention. This unquestionably is fairly representative of the dominant Democratic sentiment of the time, and it is hoped it will have the desired effect upon Mr. Bryan.

The champions of ward local option are seemingly just beginning to realize that Hanna has a deal with the brewers that means the side-tracking of their measure. It is decidedly strange they should be so late getting on to a fact that everybody has known all along.

It is now announced that Hanna will permit Foraker to be a delegate to the Republican National Convention. What a considerate boss Hanna must be. The few Foraker organs and followers must feel grateful.

DOUBLE-DEALING

On the Part of Roosevelt Stirs Foraker's Ire

Alleged Surrender of Ohio to Hanna Is the Cause of the Trouble--Foraker Hurries to the White House and Demands Explanation.

Washington, Jan. 26.—The relations between President Roosevelt and Senator Joseph Benson Foraker, heretofore excessively friendly, are becoming strained. Senator Foraker suspects that he is being made a victim of double dealing. The President has assured him to the contrary. Senator Foraker is now impatiently waiting for the President to fulfill certain demands which have been made upon him in connection with the pending fight in Ohio and his future course will depend upon what the President does.

Foraker is still engaged in planning and organizing a campaign to control the forthcoming Ohio state convention in the interest of the President. The President's personal newspaper organs all over the country have stated that the Ohio fight was over, that Foraker had abandoned it and that the President had consented to Hanna naming the Ohio delegates.

Last Friday Foraker went to the White House and asked the President point blank if he had withdrawn his name and the prestige of the administration from those Republicans in Ohio who desire to make a fight for Roosevelt delegates. The Senator had been informed by telegraph while in Ohio that such was the case and, knowing that his correspondence was reliable and usually accurate, he believed what the dispatch said. The President denied the accuracy of the dispatch and assured the Senator that he was much in favor of a battle with Hanna in Ohio as he has ever been.

Thereupon Foraker presented certain demands, which included appointments for fifteen or twenty desirable federal offices in Ohio that are now occupied by hold-overs. The President assured the Senator that he would give this matter his earnest attention and indicated, in a manner that was entirely satisfactory to Senator Foraker, that the patronage would be at the Senator's disposal.

Foraker explained to newspaper correspondents after leaving the White House that his interview with the President was satisfactory and that he had no doubt that the President would back up his attempt to prevent the election of a delegation from Ohio that was hostile to himself. That night the Associated Press sent a message broadcast to the newspapers of the country to the effect that Senator Foraker would abandon his fight in Ohio. Six or eight special correspondents, who received much of their political inspiration direct from the White House, sent out stories of similar import.

It was taken for granted by persons familiar with sources of news in Washington that that particular bit of news came direct from the President. Senator Foraker's friends jumped at this conclusion when they heard of it and it was obvious that the Senator himself suspected that his friends were right when he took one of the dispatches in question straight to the President and asked him to disavow or acknowledge responsibility for it.

Foraker was in a towering rage. He is not the sort of a man who will tolerate double dealing, no matter from what source. He entered into a partnership with the President in good faith, and feeling assured that he had discharged every obligation that the contract called for he was determined that the President should do likewise. He asked the President to read the dispatch in question and said that it was generally believed that it had been inspired by some person in authority at the White House.

"In other words, Mr. President," said the Senator, "it is generally rumored among newspaper correspondents and others that the President inspired the dispatch. I do not believe it, but inasmuch as the story has reached wide circulation I think there should be a disavowal of it from you."

The President disavowed responsibility for the dispatches. He said he was not aware that they had been sent out; that his attitude on the Ohio fight was not changed and that the Senator could rely upon his co-operation.

"I am glad to hear you say so, Mr. President," said Senator Foraker, and shortly after he left the executive offices.

The episode has created a bad impression in Washington, although it is exactly similar to a dozen other episodes of the last two years. Senator Foraker's friends feel that the President has not only abandoned him but by methods which have never heretofore found a place in political warfare cut the ground from under him by use of the press associations. Senator Foraker, his friends say, is not deceived about what has happened or what is likely to happen, and is only waiting for the President to make good in connection with the patronage of the state.

In the meantime he will keep his own counsel, but when the time arrives for him to explain his position to the public he will do so with characteristic fearlessness. The Senator's friends have no idea that the President will keep faith with him in the matter of patronage. They are perfectly satisfied that the President in his own mind has abandoned the Ohio fight, and if Foraker does not mention it again will dismiss it from his thoughts altogether.

HANNA CROWD

Spoiling for a Fight in Ohio With the Forakerites

Washington, D. C., Jan. 26.—Political friends of Senator Hanna in Ohio are urging him to have a regular old-fashioned stand-up and knock-down contest with the Foraker element of the Republican party this spring. They are spoiling for a controversy of this sort on the ground that it is about time for the junior Senator to assert in the most positive manner his supremacy at the head of the organization in the Buckeye State if he can. Of course they are confident he will emerge victor from the contest, and they expect there will be glory enough to pass around among his lieutenants.

The Cleveland Senator's followers argue that this would be the best time for him and his colleagues to measure their respective strength. Mr. Hanna, they say, has nothing at all to lose, since he is assured of at least six years more in the Senate, and there is no important state election to be held this year. They take the position that whatever the outcome of the fight may be, it will in no sense interfere with Republican success at the presidential election next November. The warriors in the Hanna camp are very eager to put on their war paint to fight the Indians in the Foraker camp, and importunities are coming to Mr. Hanna from all parts of the state.

The Hanna people would like two separate slates of candidates for delegates at large to be put up and presented to the state convention. One to be headed by Mr. Hanna and the other by Mr. Foraker. They want the Republicans of Ohio to be advised at once who are to be selected for each slate, so that no time may be lost in starting the contest. Whether this program will meet with the junior Senator's approval is not known. Just at present on account of his illness, he is giving as little attention to political matters as possible, for he has been advised by his doctor to give his mind a complete rest in order to expedite his recovery.

QUAYS ILLNESS

Is Causing Roosevelt No Little Trouble, for He is the President's Chief Adviser.

Washington, Jan. 26.—Senator Quay is very sick in Florida—so sick that his Philadelphia physician has been summoned to go at once to the Senator. This news was received by the President and his friends with forebodings of trouble, for Quay has been the President's ablest adviser and friend since his political affairs became entangled.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to thank the friends and neighbors at the attending physician Dr. Barker who assisted us during the illness and death of my beloved daughter, Cora Tompkins. Mother.

DALZELL FOR CHAIRMAN

Roosevelt, Minus Hanna and Quay, Would Like Pittsburger for Manager.

Washington, Jan. 26.—With Senator Hanna a possible candidate for the presidency and withstanding the appeals of the President to take charge of his campaign, as chairman of the National committee, and with Senator Quay practically out of the question as a campaign manager owing to his continued ill health, Roosevelt's friends are casting about in many directions in the hope of finding a leader who is competent and available from a political standpoint and at the same time willing to assume the duties.

Senator Penrose has for some time, it is said, cherished the hope that he might be the one chosen, and his allies held himself on the President's side to such a degree that he is credited by the friends of Senator Hanna with investigating much of the gossip about his enmity to the President. In spite of this, the friends of the President have not looked upon Penrose with any degree of enthusiasm, and are seeking further.

The latest name mentioned in the connection is that of Congressman Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, who is credited with the ability for the place, and at the same time being acceptable in case Senator Hanna should become ineligible for the place through too avowed opposition to the renomination of Roosevelt.

COLD AND PNEUMONIA

This Changeable Weather Responsible For Many Cases.

The changeable weather of the past few weeks is responsible for many colds and cases of pneumonia. Physicians are fearful that the grip epidemic of last winter will visit the country again and they advise all to be extremely careful. Especially does this advice apply to parents who should see to it that their little ones are not allowed to run down. Only persons with weakened vitality or bodies filled with impurities are taken down by pneumonia and grip.

Of course, if you have a cold, and weaken the system by the use of poisons contained in the balsams of this, syrups of that, and other so-called cough cures, you have robbed your body of fighting power and the pneumonia and grip germ gets a hold.

That is one reason why so many people have their health permanently injured by the grip—because the symptoms of the cold were stopped while the deadly drugs paralyzed the nerves and weakened the body. The impurities remain and poison the system, and there is not vitality enough left to get over it.

This is important for you to know, and the knowledge will be of benefit to you, aside from any advertising value this article has for Father John's Medicine, which contains no opium, morphine, or other poisonous drugs.

Father John's Medicine, as we have said before, builds you up at the same time it cures the cold and grip. You should begin taking it right along and give it to the children. It gives them strength to fight off and escape contagious disease.

SUCCESSOR

To Chief Russell at Columbus is the Subject of Conference with Mayor Jeffrey Monday.

Columbus, O., Jan. 26—Mayor Jeffrey, and the board of public service held a conference at noon Monday concerning the appointment of a chief of police to succeed the late John A. Russell. The subject was discussed in a general way, but it was stated that no definite conclusions were reached.

President Sowers stated Monday that the board is as yet undecided as to whether to reverse its rule which resulted in the promotion of the late John A. Russell from captain to chief.

He said: "I have not heard any complaints against Captain O'Connor, the present acting chief."

Detectives Richard Owens and Jas. Dundon have both announced their intention to take the examination for chief in case one is held.

Among the candidates for chief of police, the name of W. S. Potter of 70 North Twentieth street and a member of the firm of Schroth & Potter, has been mentioned. Mr. Potter is a prominent member of the Republican Glee club and has many friends.

FATHER

Fell Down Stairs With His Babe In His Arms Monday Morning In Columbus.

Columbus, Jan. 26—Patrick Welch, a bottler in one of the local breweries fell headlong down the stairway at his residence, 189 South Mitchell street on Monday morning, while carrying his 15 months old daughter. Mr. Welch was severely shaken up, but apparently suffered no serious injury. The child received a small gash in the scalp and has an indentation in the skull which may cause serious results, although as yet nothing has appeared to cause any alarm.

It was between 8 and 9 o'clock Monday morning when Mr. Welch went upstairs to get the child and take it down for the day. Just as he started down he tripped on the carpet and fell headlong. He was fortunate himself, but the little one's head struck on a box at the bottom of the stairs. The child does not as yet show any signs of severe injury, but it is possible that concussion of the brain may develop later. Mr. Welch walked to the office of Dr. John Wilson, who attended him and the child.

RECEDING FLOOD GROUNDS FISH.

Both are in serious condition, and grave doubts are entertained for their recovery.

CHILD FRIGHTFULLY BURNED.

Tiffin, O., Jan. 26—Lola, the five year old daughter of Allen Norris, a farmer was horribly burned while lighting a piece of paper at a stove. The child is suffering extreme agony and will not live.

Mason's home is in Groveport and it was to that place he first started after his escape.

CRUSHED

UNDER A SLED HEAVILY LOADED WITH FIREWOOD

George Henderson, a Muskingum County Farmer Is Found Dead by His Wife Monday.

Zanesville, Jan. 26—Deah came to George Henderson, of near Rowland, two miles south of Hichory, Monday afternoon in a terrible manner.

Mr. Henderson was hauling firewood from the woods a short distance from his home. In going to the woods he was compelled to cross a creek which is only a few hundred feet from his home. Shortly after dinner he left the house and went to the woods and getting a load of wood started back. Just how the accident happened no one can say. His wife and sister-in-law, Miss Seeker who was visiting at his home saw the unfortunate man lying on the creek bank. They suspected something was wrong and went to investigate. He was dead when they reached him.

It is supposed that in descending the incline leading to the water's edge he slipped from the load on which he was riding and fell beneath the runners of the sled and life was crushed out in almost an instant. The team had stopped just where the accident had occurred.

Warren, O., Jan. 26—Niles was visited by a disastrous fire in the business portion of the city Sunday night in which contents were entirely consumed. The loss will reach from $75,000 to $100,000. The city was without water as a result of the flood and an appeal to the Warren department for aid resulted in a steamer and hose cart being sent overland and the water pumped in this way helped largely in controlling the flames which were not subdued until 2:30 o'clock on Monday morning.

Later the Niles waterworks pumps were started and the city is safe from further menace by fire.

ATTORNEYS

Who Defended Murderer Harmon in First Trial Reappointed, but They Want More Fees.

Columbus, O., Jan. 26—The judges of the common pleas court at a meeting Monday morning considered the question of the appointment of attorneys to defend Louis Harmon in his new trial and decided that the appointment of Messrs. Huling and Allen, who defended Harmon in his first trial through the criminal and circuit courts, should stand, and these same attorneys will again have charge of his case. The only question was as to compensation. The case stands now precisely as when Harmon was first indicted and the attorneys feel that if they fight it all over again they should have extra compensation.

The judges decided that the attorneys should serve, and the question of extra compensation will be taken up later.

Another matter brought up was the question of compensation to the county clerk for compiling and arranging the bar docket.

WHY MOTHERS WORRY

Did you ever hear a mother worry over a plump child? There is no better bank of health for a child to draw from than a good supply of healthy flesh.

Scott's Emulsion not only gives a child weight and plumpness, but it feeds the brain, bones and nerves with strength and active power.

Fewer mothers would worry if they knew more about Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion is substituted by cheap emulsions and so-called wines, cordials and extracts of cod-liver oil. They can do you no good and are dear at any price. Why buy them? Scott's Emulsion has been the one reliable preparation of cod-liver oil for nearly thirty years.

STILL A MYSTERY

Is the Foul Murder of Miss Schafer at Bedford, Ind. --All Clews Up to Date Have Failed--Coroner's Verdict as to the Manner of Her Death.

Bedford, Ind., Jan. 23.—The officers who are conducting the investigation of the murder of Sarah Catherine Schafer, the Latin teacher whose mutilated body was found in a cab shed in an L street alley, Friday morning, admitted last night that they had unearthed no evidence worthy of being regarded as a tangible clew. Nearly 100 witnesses have been examined by men trained in detecting criminals. Every rumor that has seemed probable or improbable has been run down, and yet the crime seems as impenetrable as the day it was discovered.

Last night there was a long, secret meeting of the City Council, with Mayor Smith, Prosecutor M.H. his Deputy, E. B. Stephenson, S. B. Lowe, president of the school board, Sergeant of Police Halpin of Chicago, and former Chief of Detectives Haager of Louisville, at which there was a frank acknowledgment that the officers are no nearer solution of the mystery and that no one is under direct suspicion.

It is evident the officers do not agree as to how Miss Schafer met her death. Some of them rely upon the story of Albert Deich, the merchant, who testifies he saw a couple answering the description of the much-wanted mysterious stranger in the long black coat and Miss Schafer near the corner of Fourteenth and M streets about the time the murder is said to have occurred. They believe Miss Schafer was met by some one she knew, and whose odious attentions she wanted to be freed from, and that in the face of desperate chances she was running, she stopped to talk with him in hopes of reaching a final understanding. They point out that in that frame of mind she might without noticing have walked from L and Fourteenth to M and back again, and then down L to the fatal alley, where she might have gone home by a short route.

The people who believe in the theory that she was murdered by an unknown lover are in majority, but Sergeant Halpin, of the Chicago police, who has been conducting the investigation, indicated that he did not have much faith in it. While refusing to make any statement as to his own theory he did not say that the girl might have been murdered by mistake. If Miss Schafer was the woman with the man in the long coat Deich saw, then Halpin can't figure why she should take a circuitous route home with a quarrelsome and odious suitor when she could have reached home by walking one block north on M street. L and M are two of the most popular streets in Bedford, and other officers, as well as Halpin, state it was nothing unusual that Deich saw the mysterious couple of whom he testifies. Still the fact that no outcry was heard between 6:30 and 7 last Thursday night by people living in the neighborhood of the L street alley is regarded as convincing evidence that the murderer was not unknown to Miss Schafer. Detective Halpin, however, thinks the murderer may have returned about 9, when some women living near by think they heard a scream.

The description of the wounds the Coroner's verdict will contain add some strength to the theory that the fatal blow was struck at the mouth of the alley or before the girl was dragged into the cab shed. It says the long wound over the left eye, which would probably have caused death without the three terrible blows on the back of the head, was filled with cinders and dirt.

The floor of the shed was muddy, but the cinders were in the alley, so this is almost convincing that the girl was knocked down by the brute and dragged instead of being carried, as many have surmised. Her clothes were water-soaked when she was found, and while there was mud in the shed it seems reasonable in view of the forthcoming decision of the Coroner to believe that the murder was committed at the mouth of the alley, which is really one of the strangest features, as it is the most open point of the street, and several men residing in the locality who were asked about the matter, say they were confident the electric light at the corner was burning. The very boldness of the deed seems to have made it successful.

In making another examination of the clothing the girl wore, another reddish brown hair like the one found in the dead girl's hand was discovered. Halpin said the first hair was found between the third and fourth finger of the girl's right hand. It was about an inch and a quarter long. The hair today was of the same length and evidently from a mustache. These hairs, it is yet believed, will form an important link in the chain of evidence. Other reddish hairs were found on the girl's gloves and clothing, but it is believed they are horse hairs picked up from the floor of the shed.

It is positively known that Miss Schafer corresponded with some person who wrote to her almost daily. The letters from this person were invariably burned after being read. After each letter there was a change in her demeanor. It either made her cheerful or gloomy. Finishing a letter from the unknown, she would toss it in the stove or into the grate. To her most intimate friends she never told the contents of these letters, or who wrote them. This is a strange feature of the case, so strange that another search was made Tuesday, hoping to find one of the letters, or something to indicate who wrote them, but nothing developed.

The State of His Affections

O sweethearts I have had a score, and just about a dozen more. For, though 'tis said to contemplate, I've wooed a maid in every state.

The first dear maid I hoped to win Resided in Chicago, Minn.; The fourth—alas, alas, alackaday!—I had to leave in Ala.

The fifth I found in Green Bay, Wis., The sixth in Montevideo, Miss., And then a maid, my soul to vex, Soon jilted me in Austin, Tex.

The next dear maid to answer "Nay" Lived down in Philadelphia, Pa., Or was it in Topeka, Kan., I saw her wed another man?

At this late day I cannot tell, It may have been some place in Del. Perhaps 'twas in Atlanta, Ga., If not in Pensacola, Fla.

But, though I care, I loved again; She dwelt, I'm sure, in Nashville, Tenn. But why go on? Enough to say, I married in Des Moines, Ia.

Yet north or south or east or west I cannot say which town was best; But this I know—alas, too late!—No other beats the single state.

—Carroll Watson Rankin in Lippincott's Magazine.

Governess—Oh, Kitty, you careless child! There are not two 'r's in "very." Rub one of them out.

Kitty—Yes, but which one?

HINTS ON LONGEVITY.

Don't Fall in Love, Says Mr. Sol Oppenheimer.

"Envy gives birth to slow fevers. Shame produces inflammation of the skin. Hatred is the parent of all manner of chronic diseases. Ambition induces continual restlessness and insomnia. Mental strength and a morbid condition of the arteries and vital organs walk hand in hand. Anxiety may cause jaundice, while prolonged anxiety sometimes causes cancer."

Mr. Sol Oppenheimer delivered himself of these and many similar utterances before the Hundred Year club in New York, lecturing on "The Relation of Mental Liberty to Longevity."

"To begin with," he declared, "mental slavery is hostile to long life. A certain amount of placidity is as necessary as mental manacles are undesirable. Parents should not tell little ones that 'children should be seen and not heard.' The minds of children should be allowed to expand naturally."

"Everything," said Mr. Oppenheimer, "which ennobles the mind strengthens the body. That which debilitates the mind weakens the body. Love shackles the mind, for when a man is smitten with the charms of a young lady he has to agree with her father in politics and her mother in religion. Marriage is one of the worst enslavers."

MAYOR CRILLY FINDS IN FAVOR OF SAFETY BOARD

Decision in the Investigation Given Out Tuesday and Completely Exonerates All Firemen from Stage. Manager Lippincott's Charges--Advice and Directions Given the Board.

Mayor Crilly today announced his findings in the investigation of the Board of Public Safety recently closed, as follows:

The City of Newark, Ohio. Mayor's Office.

To F. A. Bolton and T. M. Ball, Directors of Public Safety of the City of Newark, Ohio:

Gentlemen--I hold an investigation of the Department of Public Safety of the City of Newark, Ohio, on the 20th and 21st days of January, A. D. 1904, and after examining 25 witnesses under oath, I respectfully submit to you the following findings:

1st. I find that the trustees of the Memorial Auditorium building did not, at their meeting held January 5, A. D. 1904, or at any other meeting held before or since that date, adopt any resolution or order forbidding the Newark city firemen admission on the stage of the Memorial Auditorium theatre; nor did the Board of Trustees of said building take any action whatever tending in any way to exclude said firemen from said stage.

2nd. I find that the manager of said theatre, Mr. John B. Rosebrough, never made any order directing said firemen to be put off the stage, or forbidding said firemen admission on the stage.

3rd. I find that Fireman Ned Roe was on the said stage at one time in the year 1901, and he there saw that the gas was too high in a fire scene, on the stage, for safety, and as was his duty, he ordered the gas lowered, whereon the stage carpenter ordered Roe from the stage.

4th. I find that Fireman Roe was not intoxicated at that time, nor at any other time that he was on the stage of said theatre, nor has any other city fireman ever been on said stage of said theatre intoxicated.

5th. I find that no member of the Fire Department of the city of Newark has been in the slightest degree intoxicated since May 4, 1903, at any time or place, at any hour of day or night, whether on or off duty.

6th. I find that Stage Carpenter Lippincott evolved from his inner consciousness the statements he gave to the newspapers, as to any orders he received from the Board of Trustees, or the manager of said theatre, or as to any fireman appearing on the stage drunk, or insulting any female connected with any show there held.

And all such statements are without any foundation in fact.

7th. I desire to call your attention at this time, officially, as the Board of Public Safety of the city of Newark, to the fact that the Memorial Auditorium is a public building, erected and paid for by Newark township, and is the property of the people and is not the property of any set of men, whether they call themselves Trustees, Managers, Stage Carpenter or Stage Hands, and it is your duty to see that all requirements of the law to insure a safe building for the assemblage of the people are fully complied with, and I hereby direct you to cause frequent and thorough examinations and inspections of said building to be made by the Chief of the Fire Department, or some other competent person, and report to me any violations of the law governing such building.

Respectfully submitted,
ANDREW J. CRILLY,
Mayor City of Newark.
Newark, O., Jan. 23, 1904.

ERNEST WALL
Former Newark Musician, Who is a Successful Operatic Soloist, Will Appear at Great Southern.

Mr. E. G. Wall, who formerly lived in Newark, where he was prominent in musical circles, as a singer and also as an instrumental artist, is now a member of the cast of the Red Feather opera company, which plays at the Great Southern in Columbus next Monday night. Mr. Wall, it will be remembered, possessed a fine tenor voice and in the opera in which he now appears opens the performance with a song which is being received most enthusiastically.

Mrs. Wall, who was Miss Grace Purcell of this city, is also a member of the company, and her many Newark friends will be pleased to know of the success of herself and her husband.

Mr. Wall is indeed fortunate in being in a cast which includes as its prima-donna Miss Grace Van Stadford, who will be remembered in Newark as the leading soprano of the Bostonians. Those who have heard Mr. Wall predict for him a brilliant success in light opera, which will be good news to his Newark friends.

POWERS-MILLER COMPANY.
The Powers-Miller Company has its temporary office in the same room with the Newark Real Estate and Improvement company, No. 31 North Park Place, where the company will be pleased to see all at this time who desire to pay their bills. Mr. Chas. Root will have charge of the collecting, beginning January 25. 1-23-df

LIZZIE HILLEARY

Is Well and Contented, According to a Letter Written to Her Mother, From Chicago.

Little Lizzie Hilleary, the Newark child who is taking the Pasteur treatment in Chicago is well and happy as is evident by the following letter to her mother, which was received on Monday:

Chicago, Ill., Jan. 24, 1904.
Mrs. Hilleary, Newark, O.:
My Dear Mamma--I will now take pleasure in writing these few lines. Papa started home yesterday, and I am awfully lonesome without him. I am rooming with a young lady and we have jolly good times together.
I just have to go once a day to the doctor's office and I am very glad of it. I like all of the boarders; they are so very kind to me.
Mamma, please send my dresses for I need them very much. Oh, I forgot to ask you how sweet little Stella is getting along. How is the boy? Did papa get home all right and how are you mamma?
It is almost time for me to go and take my treatment, so I will close, hoping to see you soon. Good bye ma and pa.
LIZZIE HILLEARY.
P. S.--Tell the boys I said good bye to them.

Notice to Taxpayers.

I have extended the tax collection to February 1, and for the benefit of laboring men and others who can not come during office hours, the Treasurer's office will be open Friday and Saturday evenings, January 29 and 30, from 6 to 8 o'clock.

W. N. FULTON,
Treasurer.

CHANGE

IN ONE OF THE OLDEST FIRMS IN NEWARK.

The A. G. Ashbrooke Wholesale Grocery Purchased by the Tenney & Morgan Co. Monday.

The wholesale grocery and notions business of Mr. A. G. Ashbrooke, at 33 South Third street, and 10 Canal street, has been sold to the Tenney & Morgan company, who will renew the stock with a full line of staple groceries and notions, and will expect to protect and supply Mr. Ashbrooke's trade. Messrs. Smith, Rehrman and Frank Smith will remain with the new firm.

The new business will not interfere with the grain, seed, wool, hides and fur business of the firm of Tenney & Morgan at No. 20 Canal street, this city.

A Very Close Call.

"I stuck to my engine, although every joint ached and every nerve was racked with pain" writes C. W. Bellamy, a locomotive fireman, of Burlington, Iowa. "I was weak and pale, without any appetite and all run down. As I was about to give up, I got a bottle of Electric Bitters, and after taking it, I felt as well as I ever did in my life." Weak, sickly, run down people always gain new life, strength and vigor from their use. Try them. Satisfaction guaranteed by Frank D. Hall druggist. Price 50 cents.

AMUSEMENTS.

The story of "Human Hearts," that beautiful poetical play of the simple life of the homely folk of rural Arkansas, deals with the happenings to honest Tom Logan, the village blacksmith. Tom dwells with his parents in a picturesque spot of the Arkansas Hills. There he has been pursuing his vocation, living a plain simple life; the mainstay of his aged parents; he loved by all who know him, and respected above his fellows. On a certain unlucky day, there came to the village a beautiful woman, a temptress unprincipled and black at heart, but with a fascination that proved to be the undoing of poor Tom Logan. He immediately proceeded to fall in love with her, asked her to marry him and she became his wife. Happy in his fancied security, Tom lavished all the affection on the woman that was possible to an honest heart like his, but it was not returned.

One day there appears on the scene a villain, the former lover of the woman, who commits a cowardly murder, and with the assistance of the woman, fastens the crime on Tom, who is tried and convicted for the crime of another. Tom is sentenced to state prison for life, and the villainous pair congratulate themselves that they have not only gotten rid of him, but have secured immunity from the law for themselves. But Providence has been watching over the blacksmith, and unseen influences are at work to thwart their plans. Humble friends of Tom Logan do not forget him and their endeavors to bring the case to the notice of the governor of Arkansas are finally successful. The villains are unmasked and Tom is proven innocent. The play is a pathetic one with many thrilling scenes, but there is a very strong comedy vein running through it which gives the necessary contrast.

Manager Nankeville has provided a most adequate stage investiture for the play, and has engaged an admirable company for its portrayal. "Human Hearts" will be tomorrow's engagement at the Auditorium.

THE BURGOMASTER.

While the big production of "The Burgomaster" which will be seen at the Auditorium Thursday night was running at Chicago recently Frank Pixley, the author of the words sent the following telegram to the stage manager of the organization: "Love and good wishes to the members of the company playing in 'The Burgomaster' my favorite child."

It is a fact that Pixley and Laders, the author and composer of the piece, have always regarded "The Burgomaster" as their best work. The big company this year includes Ruth White as "Willie," Oscar L. Pizarro as the Burgomaster, Wm. Riley Hatch, Fred Ricketts, Charles Sharp, R. J. Moore, George McKissack, Harriet Sheldon, Louise Brachett and Josephine Dill.

RECEPTION

By Second Presbyterian Church Members for New Pastor, Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Cosgrove.

This evening at the Second Presbyterian church an elaborate reception will be tendered the pastor, Rev. Thomas A. Cosgrove, and wife, by the ladies of the church. Rev. Mr. Cosgrove has been in Newark for nearly a month now, and although he and his wife are warm hearted, sociable people, who have rapidly become acquainted with great numbers of the people of the church it is impossible in the nature of things, that their circle of acquaintances is anything but somewhat limited. It is for this reason and to give not only members of the church, but also those who attend worship at the Second Presbyterian, an opportunity to know the new pastor and his family, that this reception is to be given.

It is hoped that as many as can possibly do so will attend this evening and aid in giving Rev. Mr. Cosgrove and family a hearty welcome to his new field of labor.

REVIEW CLUB

Will Entertain the Federated Clubs of Newark and Granville Thursday Morning at Taylor Hall.

Mr. Darrach, who directs the department of elocution at "Stanley Hall," Minneapolis, Minn., will present to the federated clubs of Newark and Granville, through the courtesy of the Review Club, on Thursday evening in Taylor Hall. A rare treat is in store for the clubs as the following extract from the Yale University Register of a recent date will testify:

To a large, intellectual and appreciative audience in the Hyperion last evening, Marshall Darrach gave one of his interesting dramatic recitals. It was the third of Mr. Darrach's "Recitals of Shakespeare's Plays," in connection with the New Haven University Extension Center, and the subject was the immortal "Hamlet."

As in previous readings of the great master's plays, Mr. Darrach adopts a method which appeals to all classes of hearers. He divides the entire play into three almost equal parts and while allowing the poet to tell the main parts of the drama, the lecturer, with a well chosen narrative lecture, connects the dialogues and speeches into a story both entertaining and instructive. Mr. Darrach impersonated eight chief characters and sustained the impassioned and distracted utterances of the melancholy Dane, the querulous ramblings of the old Polonius, the gentle month service of Ophelia, the cunning sophistries of the Queen, the hard casuistries of the King, with a abiding interest from beginning to end. The most striking of Mr. Darrach's interpretations were "The Ghost's Message to Hamlet," "Polonius' Advice to His Son," "Hamlet's Soliloquy on Death," "The Scene Between Hamlet and His Mother," and the "Graveyard Scene."

Altogether the powerful play shone in Mr. Darrach's rendering the almost unimpaired depth of philosophic portend with all the power and sympathy of a true artist, a vivid tragic picture graphically told.

NEARLY SUFFOCATED BY NATURAL GAS FUMES

Mrs. Toney Wolfe, Is Found Unconscious by Her Husband Upon His Return from Work Monday Evening--Two Roomers Also Affected.

Mrs. Toney Wolfe of 76 Western avenue, and two roomers at her home, had a terrible and nearly fatal experience with fumes of natural gas and narrowly escaped death by asphyxiation, Monday afternoon.

Mr. Wolfe is employed at Ludy's saloon in West Newark and during the afternoon received a telephone message from his wife saying she was quite ill with a headache.

As soon as he was through work he hastened home, arriving there about 7:20 o'clock in the evening. When he entered the house he detected the fumes of gas and upon investigation found his wife lying on a bed unconscious, while on a couch in an adjoining room lay Orley Rutledge, a conductor on the C. B. & N., who "comes at Wolfe's, in nearly the same condition. Mr. Wolfe was immediately constant of the trouble, threw open the door and windows to admit the fresh air, and sent for Dr. I. H. Robb, who went to the scene as quickly as possible. He worked with the patients for some time, and they were brought back to consciousness.

No examination was made to ascertain the cause of the escape into the room of the gas fumes, and as soon as the house was closed up the same conditions prevailed as earlier in the day with the same results, the accumulation of the deadly fumes in the house.

Mr. Wolfe was up and in and out of the house during most of the night administering to the sick, and thus got a good supply of fresh air. When he left to go to work his wife complained of being chilly, and he pushed up the window that had been let down for ventilation in the bed room.

This was about 4:30 o'clock Tuesday morning. In the room with Conductor Rutledge also slept Mr. Will Duff, a fireman on the C. B. & N. road, who retired about 11 o'clock, after assisting Mr. Wolfe in caring for the sick. He had come home from work about 5 o'clock Monday evening and had not experienced any of the gas fumes.

About 7 o'clock this morning Mr. Wolfe was notified that all was not right at his home, and hastening there he found Mrs. Wolfe Rutledge and Duff unconscious, and the house almost suffocating with the fumes of gas. Dr. Robb was again called and revived the sufferers and it was then learned that Duff had fainted as soon as he got out of bed, while Rutledge and Mrs. Wolfe had in turn fainted to the telephone and fainted before they could send a message calling aid. This was finally accomplished by Mrs. Wolfe, which undoubtedly saved the lives of all three.

Mrs. Wolfe recovered more rapidly than the men, neither of the latter being able to go to work today. In fact Duff is seriously ill and was taken to his home in Lacey by his brother, Ed Luffe and Superintendent of Mo-
